

NSW INDEPENDENT TRIAL EXAMS – 2021
ENGLISH (ADVANCED) PAPER 1 TRIAL HSC EXAMINATION
MARKING GUIDELINES

Answer suggestions throughout these marking guidelines should not be seen as exhaustive or prescriptive. Please award marks based on student responses (which may not be listed here) but are supported by sound textual references.

Section I – Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences

20 marks

Question 1 (5 marks) English Advanced and English Standard

Your answers will be assessed on how well you:

- demonstrate understanding of human experiences in texts
- analyse, explain and assess the ways human experiences are represented in texts

Text 1 – Prose nonfiction and Text 2 – Graphic novel extract

How do the composers of these texts use a variety of language forms and features to communicate differing perspectives of a city?

Outcomes: EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-6

Criteria	Marks
• Skilfully identifies a number and variety of language forms and features of BOTH texts that communicate differing perspectives of a city • Demonstrates clear understanding of how the composers of these texts use language forms and features to communicate these differing perspectives • Demonstrates effective support using detailed, well-chosen evidence	5
• Identifies several language forms and features of BOTH texts that communicate differing perspectives of a city • Explains soundly how the composers of these texts use language forms and features to communicate these differing perspectives • Demonstrates competent support using appropriate evidence	3–4
• Identifies ONE or TWO language forms and features of BOTH texts which show differing perspectives of a city • Attempts to explain the effect of language forms and features but demonstrates only limited understanding	1–2

Question 1 continues on the next page

Question 1 continued

Answers could include:

Text 1 – Prose nonfiction

This text presents a person at home, comfortable in the chaos of a city of contradictions.

- Personal anecdote: first person narrative
- Various types of contrasts which illustrate his central thesis – the co-existence of many cultures: “standing transfixed in the middle of the pavement one night, people stepping blithely around me”
 - Juxtaposition: “so many dreams and brute realities”, “you belong – and yet still also be true to your home country”
 - Oxymorons: “a gorgeous rubbish heap of a city”
- Geographical details to establish authenticity: “time-life building”, “brooklyn bridge”, “manhattan”,
- Positive imagery (simile, metaphor or allusion) to describe the experience of being in the city – tone of acceptance: “it feels as if i am floating in the air”, “hear a dozen different languages being spoken on the same street — a true babel”
- Figurative language which echoes the literal experience: “the full architecture of human desire and folly is on display”, “a mirror to the pure anarchy of the human condition”

Text 2 – Graphic novel extract

This text presents a threatening perspective of the city.

- Perspective from the literal gutter
- All visible aspects of the city are man-made
- Visual images of garbage and rubbish echo the perspective of the moral qualities of the city
- Image suggests a deeper underworld to the shabby surface
- Lights illuminate the dark to an extent, but nothing is visible beyond the lit areas, emphasising possible threat
- Loneliness of character
- Striding suggests purpose to his walk
- Mask on eyes – ambivalent – threat or saviour? (maybe part of the city underworld or crime scene, or maybe his being sent in as an “undercover” man to clean up the city – either way the mask suggests the need to disguise himself and indicates some sort of danger the city holds)
- Newspaper article’s reference crime and criminals
 - Language in the paper uses metaphor to connect explicitly the image of the gutter with the threat of crime in the city
- Large overcoat suggests may be something under the clothing – hidden threats in the city – jacket could also relate literally to the coldness of the city or, metaphorically, to the absence of any human warmth/relationships

Question 2 (5 marks) English Advanced and English Standard

Your answers will be assessed on how well you:

- demonstrate understanding of human experiences in texts
- analyse, explain and assess the ways human experiences are represented in texts

Text 3 — Poem

How does the poet use the motif of the roses to illustrate the persona's range of life experiences?

Outcomes: EN12-1, EN12-3, EN12-5

Criteria	Marks
• Explains effectively how the poem uses the motif of the roses to illustrate the persona's range of life experiences • Supports explanation with detailed, appropriate evidence from the poem	5
• Explains how the poem uses the motif of the roses to illustrate the persona's range of life experiences • Supports explanation with appropriate evidence from the poem	3–4
• Makes at least ONE relevant point about how the poem uses the motif of the roses to illustrate the persona's range of life experiences • Demonstrates only limited support from the poem	1–2

Answers could include: The motif of the roses allows for links to events throughout her life to be recalled.

- The names of the roses are literally linked to events and times in her life. She plays on the names to suggest meetings (rendezvous etc), companionship and fun times (cheer, fiesta etc)
- Metaphors based on names: “stage door, recital, double ovation” linked to the roses’ role in her life as “small performances”
- Range of sensory imagery linked to roses:
 - Visual (“the spent petals”, “each unhurried petal”)
 - Olfactory – repetition of words like scents, perfume and fragrance and the capacity of scent to suggest past experiences (“some perfume/takes her back”)
 - Smell is then linked through the names to music (aural) imagery and a metaphorical sense of “the pure fragrance of her life” allowing her to “sing any song she wanted”
- The motif of the roses allows for links to events throughout her life to be recalled

Question 3 (4 marks) English Advanced only

Your answers will be assessed on how well you:

- demonstrate understanding of human experiences in texts
- analyse, explain and assess the ways human experiences are represented in texts

Text 4 – Prose fiction

Explain how aspects of the narrator's character and personality are presented in the extract.

Outcomes: EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8

Criteria	Marks
• Explains effectively how this text presents aspects of the narrator's character and personality • Supports explanation with detailed, appropriate evidence from the text	4
• Explains how this text presents aspects of the narrator's character and personality • Supports explanation with appropriate evidence from the text	3
• Describes how this text presents aspects of the narrator's character and personality • Provides limited supporting evidence from the text	2
• Makes a few relevant points about the narrator's character and personality	1

Answers could include:

- Self-awareness
- Historical and contextual understanding of his family's dual colonial background
- Awareness of irony of situation shown through:
 - The contrast between his "impoverished" ancestry and the English estate in which he now lives, as well as explicit statement
 - Similarities between the "the colonial plantations or estates of Trinidad" and "this estate in the English county of Wiltshire"
 - The English language which provides his life and his livelihood as a product of British colonisation
 - Colonisation and empire which had shaped him had also shaped the English estate on which he lives as it "had been created in part by the wealth of empire. But then bit by bit it had been alienated"
- Fastidiousness, ambition, intelligence and learning, shown through:
 - Formality of language choices
 - Balanced complex sentences
 - Use of subordinate clauses
 - Use of colons to balance sentences

Question 4 (6 marks) English Advanced only

Your answers will be assessed on how well you:

- demonstrate understanding of human experiences in texts
- analyse, explain and assess the ways human experiences are represented in texts

Text 5 – Prose nonfiction extract

Analyse how this text explores the relationship between the author and Truganini.

Outcomes: EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8

Criteria	Marks
• Analyses effectively how the text explores the relationship between the author and Truganini • Uses detailed, well-chosen supporting evidence	6
• Analyses how the text explores the relationship between the author and Truganini • Uses well-chosen supporting evidence	4–5
• Describes how the text explores the relationship between the author and Truganini • Uses some supporting evidence	2–3
• Makes minimal relevant points about the text	1

Answers could include:

- References to Aboriginal settlement paralleled with European settlement
- Explanation of personal family history, tracing ancestry back to Richard Pybus
- Grim irony of the “dispossession and destruction of the original people of Tasmania” being the “foundation narrative of [the author’s] family”
- Structural interweaving of the Pybus and Truganini stories with stories in the Pybus family of Truganini at different stages of her life interacting with different members of the Pybus family
- Contrasts between the author’s and her ancestor’s perspectives of Truganini: “By rights, of course, it was not their land but hers. They would never have seen it that way.”
- Contrast in language in the naming of the place: “Lunawanna Alonnah, renamed Bruny Island by colonial settlers”
- Contrast between the author’s childish ignorance expressed in simple sentences and non-sentences (“no one ever told me of my family connection to Truganini. I doubt anyone knew. Or cared.”) And her more nuanced judgement as an informed adult, expressed with sophistication and emotionally powerful language: “to reduce a lively, intelligent, sensual woman to a helpless, tragic victim of relentless historical change is another thoughtless act of dispossession”
- Also displays her sensitive awareness of Truganini’s treatment
- Use of first person to emphasise the personal nature of the account

Section II – Texts and Human Experiences

Question 5 (20 marks) English Standard, English Studies and English Advanced

Your answers will be assessed on how well you:

- demonstrate understanding of human experiences in texts
 - analyse, explain and assess the ways human experiences are represented in texts
 - organise, develop and express ideas using language appropriate to audience, purpose and context
-

Prose Fiction

Analyse the relationship between the title of the prose fiction text and the human experiences represented in the text. In your response, refer in detail to ONE of the prescribed prose fiction texts listed below.

- Anthony Doerr, All the Light We Cannot See
- Amanda Lohrey, Vertigo
- George Orwell, Nineteen Eighty-Four
- Favel Parrett, Past the Shallows

OR

Poetry

- Rosemary Dobson, Rosemary Dobson Collected

Analyse the relationship between the titles of Rosemary Dobson's poems and the human experiences represented in the poems. In your response, refer in detail to Cock Crow and ONE other of her prescribed poems. The prescribed poems are:

- Young Girl at a Window
- Over the Hill
- Summer's End
- The Conversation
- Cock Crow
- Amy Caroline
- Canberra Morning

- Kenneth Slessor, Selected Poems

Analyse the relationship between the titles of Kenneth Slessor's poems and the human experiences represented in the poems. In your response, refer in detail to Vesper-Song of the Reverend Samuel Marsden and ONE other of his prescribed poems. The prescribed poems are:

- Wild Grapes
- Gulliver
- Out of Time
- Vesper-Song of the Reverend Samuel Marsden
- William Street
- Beach Burial

OR

Question 5 continues on the next page

Question 5 (continued)

Drama

Analyse the relationship between the title of the drama text and the human experiences represented in the text. In your response, refer in detail to ONE of the drama texts listed below.

- Jane Harrison, *Rainbow's End, from Vivienne Cleven et al., Contemporary Indigenous Plays
- Arthur Miller, *The Crucible

OR

Shakespearean Drama – William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice

Analyse the relationship between the title of The Merchant of Venice and the human experiences represented in the text.

Nonfiction

- Tim Winton, *The Boy Behind the Curtain

Analyse the relationship between the title of The Boy Behind the Curtain and the human experiences represented in the text. In your response, refer in detail to TWO of the prescribed chapters listed below. The prescribed chapters are:

- Havoc: A Life in Accidents
- Betsy
- Twice on Sundays
- The Wait and the Flow
- In the Shadow of the Hospital
- The Demon Shark
- Barefoot in the Temple of Art

OR

- Malala Yousafzai and Christina Lamb, *I am Malala

Analyse the relationship between the title of I am Malala and the human experiences represented in the text.

Film

- Stephen Daldry, *Billy Elliot

Analyse the relationship between the title of the film and the human experiences represented in the film.

OR

Question 5 continues on the next page

Question 5 (continued)

Media

- Ivan O'Mahoney, *Go Back to Where You Came From

Analyse the relationship between the title of the television documentary series, and the human experiences represented in the documentary. In your response, refer in detail to ONE episode from Series 1 and The Response. The prescribed episodes are:

- Series 1: Episodes 1, 2 and 3
and
- The Response

OR

- Lucy Walker, *Waste Land

Analyse the relationship between the title of this documentary and the human experiences represented in the text.

Question 5 continues on the next page

Question 5 (continued)

Outcomes: ES12-1, ES12-2, ES12-4, ES12-5, ES12-7, ES12-9

Criteria	Marks
- Analyses skilfully and perceptively the relationship between the title of the text and human experiences represented in it - Presents an insightful and focused response with detailed and relevant textual support - Composes a sustained and skilful analysis using language appropriate to audience, purpose and context	17–20
- Analyses thoughtfully the relationship between the title of the text and the text specified in the question - Presents a competent response with appropriate textual references from the prescribed text - Composes an effective analysis using language appropriate to audience, purpose and context	13–16
- Analyses the relationship between the title of the text and the text specified in the question - Presents a sound response supported by textual references from the prescribed text - Composes an adequate analysis with some understanding of audience, purpose and context	9–12
- Discusses the relationship between the title of the text and the text specified in the question - Presents a response with limited textual support - Writes a discussion with limited appropriateness to audience and purpose	5–8
- Attempts a response - Demonstrates only limited knowledge of the prescribed text	1–4

NSW INDEPENDENT TRIAL EXAMS – 2021
ENGLISH (ADVANCED) PAPER 1 TRIAL HSC EXAMINATION
MAPPING GRID

Question	Mark	Content	Syllabus outcomes
Section I
1	5	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-6
2	5	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5
3	4	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5
4	6	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5
Section II
5	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Prose Fiction	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Prose Fiction	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Prose Fiction	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Prose Fiction	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Poetry	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Poetry	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Drama	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Drama	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Shakespearean Drama	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Nonfiction	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Nonfiction	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Film	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Media	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8
“	20	Common Module – Texts and Human Experiences Media	EA12-1, EA12-3, EA12-5, EA12-7, EA12-8

English Advanced

Paper 1 – Texts and Human Experiences

Stimulus Booklet for Section I and List of prescribed texts for Section II

Section I		Pages
Text 1	Image.....	2
Text 2	Nonfiction extract.....	3
Text 3	Poem.....	4-5
Text 4	Biography extract.....	6-7
 Section II
	List of prescribed texts.....	8-9

Section I

Text 1 – Image

THOMAS STRUTH

Art Institute of Chicago II, Chicago, 1990
Chromogenic print mounted to acrylic
Edition Number Three of Ten
184.1 x 219 cm, framed
Reproduced with permission

Text 2 – Nonfiction extract

Against Honeymoons

My sense is that a lot of people actually have a hard time travelling for leisure. There are some people, of course, who fail to really “get away” because they can’t leave something behind. The classic image would be the honeymooner apologizing as she ducks into a room to take another call from work. When she isn’t on the phone you can catch her staring into space.

Solutions to being elsewhere are, it seems to me, pretty straightforward under most circumstances. Shut off the phone. Then time is on your side. My distraction, by contrast, was a bit more insidious. It seemed to feed on the objectively good experiences of the trip itself. It wasn’t that I couldn’t see my perfect macadamia-crusted mahi-mahi very clearly. But it was like I aimed my fork at the fish but kept accidentally skewering something else – my future reminiscence of it. I wasn’t elsewhere, but I seemed to inhabit a time other than the present. I wanted to be, as we say, “present”. But my problem with presence seemed to be capable of feeding my own awareness of it. “Just relax”, I would tell myself. “Well, I can’t relax when I’m anxious about relaxing”, I would (accurately) reflect, and so forth as new and seemingly more nuanced forms of self-correction recommended themselves seductively as a solution to the problem they were creating.

CHARLES COMEY

Extract from ‘Against Honeymoons’

The Point Magazine, Examined Life (Issue 10), 2015

Reproduced with permission

Text 3 – Poem

Tissue

Paper that lets the light shine through, this is what could alter things.
Paper thinned by age or touching,

the kind you find in well-used books,
the back of the Koran, where a hand
has written in the names and histories, who was born to whom,

the height and weight, who died where and how, on which sepia date, pages smoothed and stroked and turned transparent with attention.

If buildings were paper, I might feel their drift, see how easily they fall away on a sigh, a shift in the direction of the wind.

Maps too. The sun shines through their borderlines, the marks
that rivers make, roads,
railtracks, mountainfolds,

Fine slips from grocery shops that say how much was sold and what was paid by credit card might fly our loves like paper kites.

An architect could use all this,
place layer over layer, luminous script over numbers over line,
and never wish to build again with brick

Text 3 continues on page 5

Text 3 (continued)

or block, but let the daylight break through capitals and monoliths, through the shapes that pride can make,
find a way to trace a grand design

with living tissue, raise a structure never meant to last,
of paper smoothed and stroked
and thinned to be transparent, turned into your skin.

IMITAZ DHAKEER

In The terrorist at my table, 2006
Bloodaxe Books
Reproduced with permission

End of Text 3

Text 4 – Biography extract

BLAINVILLE

All sorts of unsuccessful tries marked by indecision.

Smiling photographs of Duchamp are rare. His characteristic expression, in snapshots as well as informal portraits, is rather somber – not self-conscious but guarded, watchful, unsurprised. A certain gravity must have been part of his nature even as a child, but this was not the part that most people noticed or remembered. What struck close friends and distant admirers alike was how easily he moved through the world. All his life Duchamp travelled light, carrying only enough baggage to sustain basic needs.

In later years, when it was commonly believed that he no longer made art, he told me that he was simply a “respirateur,” a “breather,” implying that this was occupation enough for anyone. The French expression bien dans sa peau – at home in his skin – fitted him perfectly, in the second half of his life, at any rate, after he had put The Large Glass behind him and embarked on his career as a chess player. It was as though the freedom that he had finally achieved in art carried over into his life, so that he could be free of art, too. Interviewers (and there were more and more of these during his last decade, when fame overtook him for the second time) marveled at how easy it was to talk with Duchamp. He replied to their questions in a relaxed, witty, highly quotable style, he never made anyone feel unintelligent, and as a result reporters rarely wrote unkind pieces about him. It was seductive, this lightness of spirit, but it also served to keep others from getting too close. The corollary to lightness was detachment. He put a high value on what he called the “beauty of indifference.”

Duchamp rarely talked about his childhood. When he did, he gave the impression that it had been a happy one, with little conflict and much shared affection, but he also made it clear that this affection did not extend to his mother. Lucie Nicolle suffered from a progressive hearing disorder that had made her almost completely deaf by the time Marcel [Duchamp] was born, and she dealt with this by withdrawing more and more into a private world of her own. Duchamp described her as “placid and indifferent.” He must have learned at an early age to internalize his feelings about her – indifference, after all, would become one of his guiding principles. Duchamp once said that he had “intensely disliked” his mother and that his two older brothers had felt the same way about her. For someone as reticent as Duchamp on the subject of personal relationships, this was a startling admission. He said virtually nothing else about her, though, and Lucie Duchamp, who left no diaries or memoirs, remains a mysterious and silent figure on the fringes of that happy childhood.

Text 4 continues on page 7

Text 4 (continued)

For the first two years of his life, Marcel [Duchamp] was virtually an only child, both his older brothers having gone away to school in Rouen the year before he was born. If his mother was distant and withdrawn, he nevertheless found a warm ally in Clemence Lebourg, the sweet-tempered country woman who had come to work for the Duchamp family when they moved to her native village of Cany-Barville and who remained with them until Lucie and Eugene died, within a week of each other, in 1925. (A few months after they died, the inconsolable Clemence drowned herself in the Seine.) Marcel “adored” his brothers, who came home for occasional weekend visits in addition to their school vacations, and he often spoke of feeling love and admiration for his father. The family member he was closest to throughout their childhood, however, was his sister Suzanne, born two years after him in the fall of 1889. The two of them were natural allies. Suzanne, a tomboy with a boisterous sense of fun, became a willing accomplice in the games and activities that her brother’s fertile imagination provided for them. Later, when their mother began to devote her attention almost exclusively to the two youngest children, Yvonne and Magdeleine (born in 1895 and 1898), Marcel and Suzanne drew even closer together.

CALVIN TOMKINS

Extract from Duchamp: A Biography, 2014
The Wiley Agency (UK) Ltd.
Reproduced with permission

End of Text 4

Section II

The prescribed texts are:

- Prose Fiction
 - Anthony Doerr, All the Light We Cannot See
 - Amanda Lohrey, Vertigo
 - George Orwell, Nineteen Eighty-Four
 - Favel Parrett, Past the Shallows
- Poetry
 - Rosemary Dobson, Rosemary Dobson Collected
 - The prescribed poems are:
 - * Young Girl at a Window
 - * Over the Hill
 - * Summer's End
 - * The Conversation
 - * Cock Crow
 - * Amy Caroline
 - * Canberra Morning
 - Kenneth Slessor, Selected Poems
 - The prescribed poems are:
 - * Wild Grapes
 - * Gulliver
 - * Out of Time
 - * Vesper-Song of the Reverend Samuel Marsden
 - * William Street
 - * Beach Burial
- Drama
 - Jane Harrison, Rainbow's End, from Vivienne Cleven et al.,
 - Contemporary Indigenous Plays
 - Arthur Miller, The Crucible
- Shakespearean Drama
 - William Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice

Section II continues on page 9

Section II prescribed texts (continued)

- Nonfiction
 - Tim Winton, The Boy Behind the Curtain
 - The prescribed chapters are:
 - * Havoc: A Life in Accidents
 - * Betsy
 - * Twice on Sundays
 - * The Wait and the Flow
 - * In the Shadow of the Hospital
 - * The Demon Shark
 - * Barefoot in the Temple of Art
 - Malala Yousafzai and Christina Lamb, I am Malala
- Film
 - Stephen Daldry, Billy Elliot
- Media
 - Ivan O'Mahoney, Go Back to Where You Came From
 - The prescribed episodes are:
 - * Series 1: Episodes 1, 2 and 3
 - and
 - * The Response
 - Lucy Walker, Waste Land

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE